

Dr Sorin Ciutacu earned his combined honours in English and Latin and his PhD in English Semantics and Philosophy at the University of Bucharest, Romania in 1986 and 1999, respectively. He also earned a Master Degree in Political Sociology from the West University of Timisoara in 2002. He has held different research scholarships and grants from sundry European universities and has spent academic time and/or taught in: Cambridge, Oxford, Birmingham, Edinburgh, London, Amsterdam, Utrecht, Paris, Heidelberg, Bonn, Berlin, Frankfurt am Main, Vienna, Zagreb, Brussels, Gent, Aveiro, Catania, Bari, Sassari, Rome etc.

Between 1991 and 2011 he taught at the West University of Timisoara, Romania various courses in English Linguistics (A Cultural History of English, Semantics, Terminology, British and American Political Discourse), Germanic Studies, Dutch Studies and European Cultural History at BA, MA and PhD level.

Between 2011 and 2016 he was Associate Professor of English Linguistics at King Khalid University, Abha, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, where he taught Cultural History of English, Sociolinguistics and English Morphology to BA and MA students as a Visiting Professor and sat on sundry research boards and journal editorial boards.

From September 2021 Dr Sorin Ciutacu is Associate Professor of English & Germanic Linguistics and Cultural History at the West University of Timisoara, Romania. In 2018 he was granted the Professor Bologna award. He has sat on sundry Ph D exam boards since his return to WUT in 2016 and at present he sits on the West University Research and Innovation Board. He lectures and writes on art topics, too.

Dr Sorin Ciutacu has presented over 70 papers at international conferences in Europe and Asia, has published around 50 papers and has co-authored several books. His latest book is: "Causality and Semantics" (2019) and he is currently working on three other books called: "Anglo-Saxon Attitudes. On Purism in English. The History of the Idea", "From Local to Global English. A Cultural History of English" and "An Introduction to Germanic Studies".