

Dear Partner, dear colleagues,

Greetings from the School of Political Science "Cesare Alfieri"!

We are writing you to present a very important possibility for scientific mobility of lecturers to the University of Florence. The School of Political Science "Cesare Alfieri" is organizing the fourth edition of the Erasmus International Week for Teaching Staff, which will be held from 27th to 31st of March 2023.

Academic staff from Erasmus partner universities will have the opportunity to give lectures to the students of the University of Florence and to participate to seminar, workshops and to the roundtable under the title "Security/insecurities. Society, economy, institutions".

This represents a great opportunity to improve and widen the international cooperation between the School of Political Science and our international partners, as well as to create new collaborations in the field of research and to offer to our students new international learning opportunities.

Academics from foreign universities are welcome to propose lectures, mostly targeted at students from our Bachelor's and Master's degree programmes. The teaching language is either English or Italian.

There are no participation fees. Participants shall use the Erasmus+ Staff Mobility programme of their own universities to cover their travelling and accommodation expenses. We invite candidates to check the availability of such fundings with their home institution.

Only Faculties from universities that have a bilateral agreement with the School of Political Science will be allowed to attend the event. Therefore, please check with your home institution for the presence of the above agreement.
