

Dear colleagues and partners,

Warm greetings from the University of Lille. We hope this email finds you well.

We are excited to share an invitation to you and your team to participate in the upcoming Staff Week on "Sustainability and Well-being in International Mobilities" at the University of Lille, from June 23th to June 27th, 2025.

Sustainability and Well-being in International Mobilities

In an increasingly interconnected world, international mobilities, encompassing student exchanges, global internships, and diverse cultural immersion programs, stand as vital bridges connecting individuals and communities across borders.

These experiences offer unparalleled opportunities for personal growth, cultural exchange, and global understanding. Yet, as we embrace the transformative power of international mobility, we must confront the imperative to ensure these ventures are not only enriching for participants but also sustainable for our planet and supportive of individual well-being.

This event seeks to delve into the intricate relationship between sustainability and well-being within the realm of international mobilities, exploring how we can cultivate experiences that are both impactful and responsible.

Staff Week - Engage in a meaningful experience

We're excited to share insights we've gathered on these crucial questions, but more importantly, we want to hear from you. This event is a collaborative space where we'll explore the 'how' together, exchanging best practices and lived experiences to build a shared understanding.

Please find the provisional agenda for the Staff Week, which includes information about the sessions and topics to be covered, onto this dedicated webpage.
