Dear Colleague,

We would invite you to the second edition of the International Week in Rome!

The second edition of the International Week in Rome will take place in Tor Vergata's School of Economics from February 15th to February 19th, 2027. The topic of the second edition is "AI & Economics".

The International Week in Rome is a short-term internationalization at home project organized by the Bachelor in Business Administration and Economics (Tor Vergata University).

During the International Week in Rome, fifty first-year Bachelor students will attend classes taught by international faculty. The students and the Faculty will have the chance to work in small groups, to facilitate participation and interaction.

Applications for faculty is now open.

Professors are expected to organize and manage an 8 hours course with a colleague. Professors can choose their preferred teaching method for the course (lectures, seminars, project-based instruction, etc...).

For each module, lecturer will have to create teaching materials and a short exam paper (10 multiple choice questions).

Instructors for each course unit will be selected on the basis of the topic of their specialization and no teams will be created with faculty members coming from the same university.

Guest professors, whose research interest is related to the theme of the initiative, can submit their application, including the course proposal, with a short description of the course, by filling in the Application form, available online:

The International Week in Rome will also include a social program, with visit to the Vatican Museums, and networking events. Coffee breaks and lunches, tickets for the Vatican Museum tour and the closing event will be offered by Tor Vergata University.

The initiative is eligible for Erasmus+ Teaching Mobility Funds.

The application deadline is October 30th.

The brochure of the event is available at the following link:
